

Dr. Travaline is Professor of Thoracic Medicine and Surgery in the Lewis Katz School of Medicine at Temple University. He earned his medical degree from Jefferson Medical College, internal medicine training at the University of Maryland Medical Center, training in pulmonary and critical care medicine at Temple University Hospital, and graduate religious studies at Villanova University. He served on the ethics committee at the University of Maryland Medical Center, and Temple University Hospital, where he also served as its chairman. He has been a regular contributor to The National Catholic Bioethics Quarterly, and currently serves as the Executive Editor for the Linacre Quarterly, the official publication of the Catholic Medical Association. He is the author or co-author of more than 120 peer-reviewed journal articles, abstracts and book chapters, including publications on topics in medical ethics, physician-patient communication, end-of-life care and selected areas in theology. He is also co-editor of the new book, Catholic Witness in Health Care: Practicing in Truth and Love. In addition to his academic medical profession, Doctor Travaline was ordained deacon for the Archdiocese of Philadelphia in 2012. He and his wife enjoy over 29 years of marriage, have four children and reside in suburban Philadelphia.